Go back!

"Go back to where you came from" had another airing this past month (July). No, not the Logie Award-winning Australian television series broadcast on SBS. Remember the series? Six Australians explore the lives and historical struggles of refugees by tracing, in reverse, the journey that refugees take to reach Australia. On its premiere night, Go Back To Where You Came From became the number one trending topic on Twitter worldwide.

The social networking service lit up again when United States President Donald Trump used the phrase in a tweet about a group of Democratic congresswomen. Criticism, rightly, followed.

"Go back to where you came from" worked as a documentary title and as a microblogging tirade because it is, at best, controversial. But I use the phrase here to describe what you have decided to do this weekend. Note the words "you have decided." Going back to Avondale is your call. And for some, it's a big call.

Going back can be intimidating. "Who will I know?" "Will I feel welcome?" "How will I fit in?" You'll probably hear stories of courage, endurance and adaptation. Celebrate the success. But you'll also hear stories of disillusionment, dislocation and of the need for tolerance, compassion and trust. Listen and learn. I hope you'll leave Homecoming with a strong sense of reconnection.

Seventh-day Adventist pioneer Ellen White reminds us of our call to connect in a book giving biblical principles of Christian education. Her message (simplified and paraphrased): God's given you the power to think and do, so explore and engage. I'll ask you on Saturday to join a journey through giving with Avondale by donating to Think&Do.

You'll be helping us complete refurbishment of a contemporary hub for new and prospective students. Now home to admissions, the academic office and student finance, with reception and the business office sharing the space, too, the Student Administration Services Building is a one-stop-shop for our most important clients. Thank you, in advance, for your role in making this building look its best, presenting a clean and modern welcome feel.

Students will find their experience more pleasant and productive.

We hope they'll make the same decision you have at their Homecoming, to go back.

Prof Daniel Reynaud

Daniel Reynaud is Professor of History in the School of Humanities and Creative Arts at Avondale College of Higher Education. His research interests lie in challenging aspects of Anzac mythology, especially in cinema and on religion, where the notion of the Anzacs' secularity has reached dogmatic proportions. He is author of Anzac Spirituality, The Man the Anzacs Revered: William "Fighting Mac" McKenzie and Celluloid Anzacs. And he has written, and appeared in, documentaries about the Anzacs and religion. Daniel worked with the National Film and Sound Archive in the recovery and partial reconstruction of several silent films, including The Hero of the Dardanelles (1915), Australia's first Gallipoli movie. He has co-authored a musical and recorded three albums of original music.

Wanted at the 2020 ReConnect

Homecoming 2020 will include a special ReConnect. Did you study for the Bachelor of Arts (Theology) degree or the Bible Instructor course or take biblical subjects at Avondale in the 1960s and on into the 1970s? Have you been or are you a partner of such a person? ReConnect is for you.

Plan now to attend the informal and fun 2020 ReConnect. Mark the date, Sunday, August 23, 2020.

Register your interest today by:

- Providing your contact information at the registration desk so we can keep you informed as we progress plans for a 2020 ReConnect.
- Helping spread the word to friends and former classmates. We want to contact and personally invite as many as possible. Help make the 2020 ReConnect a great success.

YOUNG ALUMNUS OF THE YEAR TAHLIA FREEMAN

A mission trip to Atoifi Adventist Hospital would prove to be a valuable experience for Tahlia Freeman. The 2013 alumna remembers sharing in the lives of those who worked at the Malaita, Solomon Islands-based hospital, learning about different cultures and practices and partnering in praising Jesus. "Avondale taught the importance of not only physical care but also social, emotional and spiritual care. This is something for which I always aim and that has greatly assisted in caring for critically sick patients and their families."

Tahlia received direct entry into the intensive care unit of the Royal North Shore Hospital as a graduate nurse. She is now a clinical nurse specialist after completing a graduate certificate at the University of Technology Sydney. But the training continues, albeit in a new field—Tahlia is a diploma student at theological training seminary Moore College. "I see theological education as a lifelong discipline as my husband [who is training to be a pastor] and I enter a life of ministry."

The Freemans are active in their local church, leading programs for and serving as mentors to young adults. They also lead a large team as directors of a camp in the July school holidays each year that teaches 250 young adults "the truth of the gospel and encourages them to live it out in their lives."

A keen sportswoman, Tahlia will soon have another passion demanding an investment of time and talent. She is about to become a mother.

Avondale Alumni honours Tahlia Freeman for demonstrating wholistic care in her professional and personal life.—Brenton Stacey

ALUMNA OF THE YEAR RUTH WEBSTER

Ruth Webster describes her Seventh-day Adventist education as a major contributor to a worldview "where respect, justice and a service mentality prevail." The "realist not idealist" completed her secondary studies at church high schools in Hawthorn and Lilydale and then three degrees in as many decades at Avondale—the last while juggling the demands of home and work. Her employer at the time, Avondale School, would over more than 25 years provide opportunities in administration and teaching. Webster retired as Assistant Head of Primary.

Her message to new teachers is to show a genuine interest in each child "but remember you're their teacher, not their buddy" and "expect to work harder in your first year than you ever thought possible."

After a career in schools, Webster continues to serve in key children's roles, notably at Avondale College Seventh-day Adventist Church. "Seeing the world through the eyes of children is refreshing," she says, adding: "It's important for them to experience love and care from those outside their immediate family."

Ruth and husband David raised three children, two of who were born in Papua New Guinea where the couple served at Kambubu High School. David became a physicist and joined the science faculty at Avondale. After he sustained a head injury, Ruth assumed greater family responsibilities. "In God's strength you discover an inner strength you didn't know you had," she says.

Avondale Alumni honours Ruth Webster for her lifetime of ministry to children and church.—Brenton Stacey

ALUMNUS OF THE YEAR LYELL HEISE

From an early age, Lyell Heise experienced the capacity to make and respond to music and witnessed in his family a strong commitment to Christianity. Combining the arts with an expression of faith has since defined a career in evangelism, chaplaincy, pastoral leadership, institutional leadership and ministerial and theological education. The highlights: pastoring churches on the campuses of tertiary education institutions and establishing and directing an Institute of Worship for the past 15 years.

As a Women in Ministry trustee, Heise has also raised $750,000 for women in Seventh-day Adventist pastoral ministry across the South Pacific. Placements, professional development and leadership pathways have followed. Inclusivity is an important value to Heise. "If the best ideas create division, I don't think they're the best ideas." Others are a commitment to excellence "without becoming too draconian as a leader" and to mentoring. "If I don't have an apprentice nearby in any ministry action or project, I'm only feeding my ego and not advancing the cause of the kingdom."

His advice to those beginning their journey in ministry: "Remember that church community and witness is a multigenerational and multicultural commitment and challenge. Nurture those coming before and after you."

Avondale has been Heise's home for about 30 years. He describes it as a "potent ministry and leadership development centre" for the church in the South Pacific.

Avondale Alumni honours Dr Lyell Heise for mentoring musicians and women in ministry and for using the arts to inform and adorn his ministry.—Brenton Stacey

ELAINE FLETCHER

Elaine Fletcher thanks her parents for giving her the opportunity they never had—to study at the Australasian Missionary College. She describes the experience as “a maturing and the opening of a door to a wider world. The lecturers of the day did give us a greater vision of world needs.” The friendships she made included a husband of 57 years, evangelist Pr Austin Fletcher.

The Lady Bible Workers Course proved a good preparation for life as a minister’s wife. The Fletchers served the Seventh-day Adventist Church in Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and at Avondale. Elaine knew marrying “not a minister but a man who is a minister” would mean a “busy, often lonely” life. “Our aim in ministry was to do a faithful work whether in city or country, large or small.”

Amid the unsettledness and the raising of four children, Fletcher would parlay her love of reading into the publication by the Review and Herald of two books. Elisha the Miracle Prophet preceded Farel the Firebrand, a biography of French–Swiss Reformation evangelist William Farel. She also wrote a chapter on public evangelism for a book about the history of the church in the South Pacific. Bookcases have now replaced Fletcher’s looms and yarns—hand weaving is a former hobby.

Sharing with Austin a love of the Scriptures no doubt helped Elaine become the New South Wales champion in a Bible Society quiz. “I have the plaque. The runner-up was happy to use the two travel tickets.”

The class of 1949 honours Elaine Fletcher for her commitment to the lifelong call of ministry.—Brenton Stacey

BEVERLEY CURRIE

Beverley Currie had from a young age a “burning desire” to be a teacher. At 17, she became a junior teacher, completing Avondale units by correspondence while working at Moonah Adventist School in Tasmania. She would become principal of five schools over a career that included public and private experience in rural, urban and mission field settings. Retirement came after a 13-year stint at Wahroonga Adventist Primary School, where she continues to offer casual relief.

Born in Lismore, Currie travelled by boat to Tasmania with her family in October 1940, traversing waters in which were Japanese mines. They settled in the Huon Valley, her father serving in the army before reverting to farming. “I remember the food ration books and the neighbourly exchange of these rare excess coupons,” she says. Currie also remembers “having to pull our weight with the work.” Perhaps this left a lasting impression because “I have always been a believer in finishing a task. . . . If you believe you can achieve a goal, even if it at first seems impossible, stick with it.”

Meeting at Avondale and marrying ministerial husband Alex would eventually lead to the raising of four sons—three are serving in CEO capacities and one runs his own business.

Over a lifetime in the classroom and in the church, Currie has seen the power of God change people’s lives. Seeing the satisfaction that comes from an understanding that Jesus personally cares is an “awesome feeling.”

The class of 1959 honours Beverley Currie for her commitment to the ministry of teaching.—Brenton Stacey

ANG & DOUG ROBERTSON

After a career in churches, classrooms and finance and administration offices across three countries, Douglas and Angela Robertson are clear about one thing: all people, regardless of background, are loved by God. “The future of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in the South Pacific rests firmly in its ability to intra-culturally translate the gospel into meaningful, practical, life-changing ways,” says Doug.

He put this ideal into practice over 14 years in Papua New Guinea, during which time exponential church growth placed enormous stress on resources. Doug helped organise training centres to equip lay leaders in the basics of pastoral leadership, “which helped hold their congregations together.” He also wrote a book in pidgin English still in use today. A Queen’s Independence Service Medal recognised his service to country. Doug retired after 14 years as a senior lecturer at Newbold and Avondale Colleges.

Angela used her teaching skills and financial experience to mentor bursars into leadership roles. A former bursar at Avondale School, senior accountant at Newbold and chief financial officer for the Adventist Development and Relief Agency Australia, she retired after 12 years as business manager for Adventist schools in northern New South Wales. Along the way came recognition as Fellow of both the Institutes of Public and Financial Accountants. “There is a positive role for professional women to play in the church and I hope this will be more widely recognised,” she says.

The class of 1969 honours Pr Douglas and Angela Robertson for a lifetime of leadership development.—Brenton Stacey

RONALD DAY

A call from a high school mentor started Ronald Day thinking about Avondale. Encouragement from Hawthorn Adventist High School friends who were already attending and the availability of government-funded support confirmed his decision to enrol. "I liked the idea of teaching rather than practicing accounting." He also liked the semi-independence to "determine my life direction."

That became clearer after graduation, with Ron beginning his teaching career at Carmel College in Western Australia before a return—this time as lecturer—to the Business Studies Department at Avondale. A 13-year tenure in the business school at The University of Newcastle followed. Ron would move into postgraduate accounting roles as a lecturer at Macquarie University and, since 2007, as a senior lecturer at The University of Sydney. He managed the accreditation of programs with the peak professional accounting bodies (CPA Australia, CA ANZ and ACCA) at both institutions.

Ron is a recipient of a Vice-Chancellor's Excellence in Education award from Macquarie, a Fellow of CPA Australia and a recipient of its New South Wales President's Award for Excellence.

Happiness, hard work, honesty and collegiality are important to Ron, who also values taking an interest in the success of his students. Travel is a hobby, as is cycling and walking. One of life's most memorable experiences? Completing his first ultramarathon along the Six Foot Track from Katoomba to Jenolan Caves.

PETER KNOPPER

Peter Knopper heard God's voice call him to ministry and wanted to be a Seventh-day Adventist missionary like his father, Jan. So, he came to Avondale as a mature age student from Newbold College in England. He had completed his O Levels at Stanborough School after attending primary, home and boarding schools in the Congo, Tanzania and Kenya. Hobbies included auto mechanics and horology. But Peter's passion: flying. He would graduate with a Bachelor of Arts (Theology) and earn his private pilot licence.

A move to Western Australia followed graduation before the call came: Homu in the Eastern Highlands of Papua New Guinea, where Peter directed the training school, managed the mission station and become an ordained minister. He learned pidgin English well enough to preach in the language and began to learn the local dialect, too. With wife Sherry and three children, Peter would serve three years.

Then, at about 9 pm on March 16, 1988, it all came to a brutal and abrupt end. Peter went outside his home to turn off the school's power generator and was shot in the head. He died in the back of his four-wheel drive as Sherry drove to the hospital. "Many people gave their hearts to Christ after Peter's death," says Sherry. "He will say the price was worth the reward. But it was hard for me to understand why a man who had such passion for the mission field and the people he worked with and for should die. My brother wrote me a song and it says, 'When we see Jesus face to face, then I'll understand.'"

CAROLYN RICKETT

A renewal of gratitude is one of Dr Carolyn Rickett's daily goals. She returns to a reflection from poet Marg Piercy: "Bless whatever you can/ with eyes and hands and tongue. If you can't bless it, get ready to make it new" ("The Art of Blessing the Day").

Now Associate Dean (Research) at Avondale, Rickett is a recipient of an Australian Learning and Teaching Council citation for empowering students to create and make new. Her part in what is a celebratory process sees students begin with blank pages and become published writers—a series of anthologies co-edited by Rickett feature the students' poems alongside those by leading Australian poets. "To open thinking to transformational possibilities provides one of the great joys for an educator."

Coordinating the New Leaves writing project where people experiencing life-threatening illnesses find expression and connection through writing poetry led to a volunteer healthcare chaplaincy role for Rickett at Sydney Adventist Hospital. Her doctoral work with The University of Sydney found writing autobiographically about illness challenges culturally reductive readings of the sick as medicalised, marginalised or stigmatised. "Stories provide refuge and strength and affirm our lives are 'innately meaningful.'"

Rickett names her parents—the "cheer squad" who would play hours of tennis with their daughter—as representing "the best of humanity to me, what it means to live and love from an ethic of care for each other."

The class of 1989 honours Dr Carolyn Rickett for sharing an authentic Christianity centred on "engaged compassion."—Brenton Stacey

ANNE THORNEYCROFT

Triple graduate Anne Thorneycroft's life path has focused on fostering resilience in students. Although Anne didn't complete high school, questioning her capacity to learn, she held onto God, going onto complete her diploma of teaching and bachelor and master's degrees, both in education, from Avondale between 1991 and 2012.

Early in her studies at a time where she needed healing, Avondale offered professional care and personal repair as she studied and raised a daughter on her own.

Anne was the sole charge primary teacher at the International School at the then Pacific Adventist College in Papua New Guinea and Oxford Christian Primary School in Geelong. She invested many years bringing out the best in her students at Warburton Christian School before it closed, and Edinburgh College as teacher, deputy principal, curriculum coordinator and learning support officer.

During professional and personal challenges, Anne has supported students and teachers academically and emotionally. Colleagues describe Anne as dependable, supportive and genuine in her care for other people.

Anne has two "amazing children and a fantastic husband" plus a small home zoo of cats, birds, a lizard, fish and dogs. Among her hobbies of painting and drawing, she has also written and published a children's book. She loves learning and continues to gain new skills to use in the school environment.

The class of 1999 honours Anne Thorneycroft for her faithful dedication to God, students, her family and life.—Rachel Humphries

Think&DO

A JOURNEY THROUGH GIVING WITH AVONDALE

Power to think and do: it's a gift from the Creator. Seventh-day Adventist Church pioneer Ellen White makes the statement to encourage us to explore and to engage (Education, p. 17). Giving to Avondale College of Higher Education through its Think&Do campaign demonstrates your support for her philosophy.

Journey with us as we accept the challenge of developing quality infrastructure. Your donation will help us complete refurbishment of a contemporary hub for new and prospective students. Donations above $2 are tax deductible in Australia.

Homecoming Offering, August 24

It's (almost) done!

New and prospective students will benefit from the refurbishment and renaming of the former Administration Building. Now home to admissions, the academic office and student finance, with reception and business office sharing the space, too, the Student Administration Services Building is a one-stop-shop for our most important clients. Your donation will help make this building look its best, presenting a clean and modern welcome feel.
