PROLOGUE

Seated in a folding chair, illumined by a candle set in a tin, Ellen G. White commented about the inspection on May 23 and 24, 1894, of the 1,500 acres proposed as the site for a college in Australia.

"Everything about the place impressed me favourably," she mused. "We desire to have our school so located that the students shall have plenty of opportunity to exercise their physical powers, as well as to exercise their mental abilities."

These ideals were not fully met in the first Australasian experiment in tertiary education at St. Kilda Road in Melbourne, 1892-4. But physical toil was well married to other aspects of learning in the industrial and night schools operated in temporary quarters at Cooranbong during 1895 and 1896.

Yet it seemed like the real beginning of the new college on April 28, 1897, when Bethel Hall could house both classes and students. A men's dormitory was added in 1898; the Chapel (known as College Hall) was opened April 13, 1899.

In 1911 the Avondale School for Christian Workers was renamed Australasian Missionary College. Technical education received fresh impetus in 1923; music was given its own brick building in 1925 and The Avondale Symphonic Choir was established in 1948.

Tertiary level study was restricted to two years until 1951 when a three-year Licentiate of Theology was offered. By 1954 bachelor degree programmes were available through external studies from the University of London, and through affiliation with Pacific Union College in California. Renamed "Avondale College" in 1964, the institution has secured Australian accreditation of its major courses (except Theology) following significant breakthroughs in early seventies.

Graduates of Avondale are scattered to many parts of the world. Albert H. Piper, the first Australasian appointed to island mission service (1901) became principal of the College in 1939. C. H. Watson, a 1909 graduate became president of the General Conference 1930-1936.

During the past two decades over 2,200 graduates have presented themselves for Adventist employment or in fulfillment of Avondale's other purpose—to send people into every structure of society with a saving message concerning Jesus Christ.

Avondale. The word conjures up a host of reactions and emotions. Nostalgia in past students, anticipation or fear in future ones, and love and respect, perhaps masked by familiarity or assumed boredom, in present ones.

Jacaranda is supposed to be every man's guide to Avondale. What a job, when everyone's reactions to the place differ! This year we wish to present Avondale as it happens, and at the same time we want to show it from different angles. For these reasons you will find no logical categories classifying the parts of Avondale: Administration, classes, work, social, etcetera. Rather, the parts of Avondale have been loosely organised into themes each of which has been treated as a point-of-view from which to see College. So you will find many different activities brought together in the one section. We hope that you will enjoy reading the book as much as we have enjoyed putting it together.

I am trying to write an article about people. There's this space I've got to fill, and time's running out. So are the ideas. What can I say that is worth saying? Lots of things have been said about people, and said often - and that's the problem: How to say something significant without sounding trite or cliched. Any helpers? . . . . . No answer. Too bad. Well, here goes.

People. (Not bad, so far. Still on the topic.) There are a lot of them at College. (Good point!) Every brand, assorted shapes, sizes, personalities - but with a common bond. They're all at College. (Big deal!) Yes, it is a big deal. They're all here to share salvation, with themselves, with their friends, and with the world. Not quite all of them, that's true.

But the impressive majority are. They are specially interested in the life of one Person, who is specially interested in the lives of all people. His concern for them (the College students, that is) has made them want to follow His example, i.e. having an interest in all people. And that's the essence of College. (Really? No - seriously?)

Yes, of course. What good are we if we're not interested in other people once we know about God? That's why Avondale is such a good place. You learn more out of class than you do in class (amazing!) because your're learning about people. With so many of them around, you can't help but learn about them. Roommates, classmates, teachers, wives, deans, neighbours (etc. etc.)

People. They're what we're here for.

HAVE A BLESSED SABBATH

Dedication

MR. BRIAN HOULISTON.

Empty vessels make the most sound. But your influence is felt rather than heard. At Avondale, where emphasis is on the academic, your philosophy is practical. You apply the spirit of your work to your interaction with others, and to your relationship with your God. You have shared with us practical wisdom and skills. These vessels are less empty because of your influence.

Hands show what our attitudes and emotions towards God, others and ourselves are like. Through hands we can communicate, to attract or repel.

QUEUES

Registration is such a stimulating time.

Usually we wait because we can't have what we want straight away. Notice what happens next time you're in the situation. Some look at the goal and ignore the rest of the people in the queue, while others get caught up in the waiting and forget what they were there for. If God is our goal, and we're waiting for Him to return, shouldn't we try to strike a balance between these two by working towards our goal, yet at the same time remembering the opportunities which are available while we wait.

We wondered how they'd cope without good ol' Mum!

Signs and Symbols

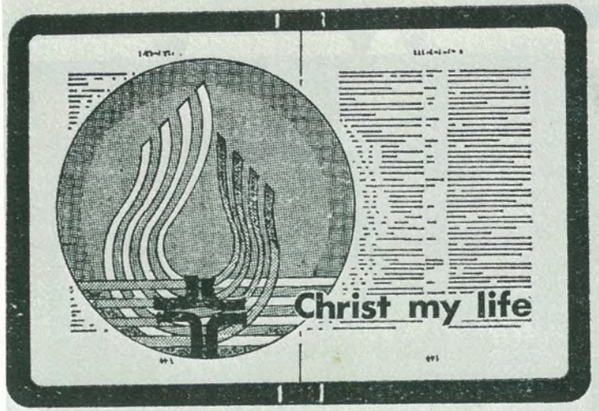

In the middle of our jokes, relaxation and fun, we have these reminders of the origin and purpose of Avondale. They do not say "stop enjoying life!", but rather give the fun a direction and depth. So, if "Jac" gives the impression that we're having a great time, that's true we are. But we haven't forgotten that we are here to gain a greater vision of Jesus and of our life work.

Well, she did, and it did.

WATER

Colin Reeve's baptism, 1978

It rained today
And the sea grew restless and dark
And its beauty was deep with meaning

I looked again
And the sea was angry and unlovely
And my fear was strong and unexplainable

The sun shone today
And the sea was calm and glassy
And my trust in You grew with the rising waves.

It rained again today
And the sea grew restless and dark
And I remembered the sunny days

And my peace was deep with meaning.

Will I let her have it?

The inevitable water fight.

Tomorrow's coleslaw.

Just puddling around.

For me, water has many emotions. At the bottom of a waterfall there is a sense of power and grandeur, and I often think of a song called "Living Water" about the woman at the well. It has the same feel about it.

On the other hand the ocean is moody and restless. Small streams are light-hearted as their rushing water tinkles and leaps over the ground, while rivers give a sense of endurance and calmness. Rain can be inspiring, as with a sudden down-pour, but is usually glum and monotonous.

If you look at our photos, most of them are associated with fun and recreation. How incredible that such a simple thing as water should be so versatile?

When the handshakes are over, the flowers wilted, the fancy hat gone, and graduation is just some photographs, what becomes of all those years at Avondale? Does their influence fade away into just a memory of "the good old days", lost in the buzz of "real life". ("Forget that College stuff son, you've got to face LIFE now.")

We hope not.

At Avondale we are looking for an education that will last a lifetime. It's an education that trains us not only in our speciality, but also in our whole being. We want to become not only teachers, secretaries, ministers, agriculturalists or whatever, but also more useful, healthier and more likeable human beings. Most of all we want to become Christian.

Avondale gives us the chance to become these things. Of course, not everyone here takes it, but it's there for the choosing. Nor do the choosers emerge with all the answers. Avondale gives us the right direction, a few guide lines, and then sends us on our way.

When we leave we hope to be able to look back and say, "Avondale was the place where we had a chance to develop, so that when life met us, we were equipped to meet it."

EPILOGUE

Jacaranda Credits

Daniel Reynaud - Editor

We try to hide behind the nearest tree. Pity it's the palm in front of Bethel. He's seen us. Lopes over. Him: Hi! Got a great idea for a theme/shot/article." Us (smiling weakly): Oh, have you? Ok, let's hear it.

Daniel remained philosophical and cheerful at the bleakest moments - like when the Grad portraits had to be retaken. He was so cheeful, in fact, that it almost annoyed us. He provided the drive to keep his team from stagnating, and was diplomatic when considering new ideas. He uncomplainingly filled in when the rest of us found it difficult to meet our responsibilities, at the same time chasing up numerous "small things" which arose and coordinating between Jac and the student body. Perhaps his energy is due to his phenomenal appetite for Caf lunches?

Jackie Simpson - Layout Editor.

Jackie usually managed to make it to meetings in time for the benediction. Apart from this, she has spent night after night flipping through proof sheets, cutting out photos and laying out pages. Consequently, she has spent day after day sleeping in History IIIa, History IIIb, Theology IIc and other assorted classes. She often found herself in the minority when it came to group decisions, but her ideas always helped us clarify the issue. Ideas are something that she has never lacked when the rest of us were dry. Special credit goes to her for her creative work on the exacting business of layout.

Heather Ritter - Literary Editor

Hmm . . . what can we say about Heather? She lives in Bethel Room 2, tells mission stories at the drop of a hat and enjoys riding bicycles down hill. In between these fascinating activities she has managed to write the articles for this book and caption the photographs. You will all appreciate, as we have, her original approach to things. Her sense of humour has helped during the long hours of tedious work which form an inevitable part of "Jac", and her willingness to help with the less exciting jobs has been appreciated. Her role as a critic of our sometimes less-than-sane ideas has also been of value. Apart from occasional bursts of insanity herself, she has been a hard working, reliable, yet still creative, member of our team.

Neil Greenwood - Photographer.

"Shut that door! This is supposed to be a dark room!" That evening gave us a healthy respect for Neil in his domain of photography. We faced quite a few unexpected problems in this area, but Neil was always willing to try again . . . and again . . . Many times has he been observed shouldering his surfboard (sorry, tripod) and using fair means and foul to trap unsuspecting victims such as Pr. Tolhurst. The work of the photographer is steady and constant, making it all the more demanding, so credit for most of the shots and all the darkroom work must go to Mr. Greenbottle.

Special Credits

Del Butler - Order form processing.
Ray Howitt - organisation of portrait taking sessions.
Mrs Fisher - printing the Grad photos.
Blanca Matic - help on layout.
Dr. Patrick - historical introduction.
Karen Prior - poem, p62.

Thanks to all those who gave their ideas about what "Jac" should be. You have contributed a considerable amount to the shaping of our ideas. Many of the ideas for this book were begged, borrowed or stolen, and we hope that we have applied them in a way that lives up to your expectations. Thank you, Pr. Colquhoun; we haven't always made life easy for you. Thanks also to the sales team for all the promotions and banquets. And finally, thank you Heather, Jackie and Neil for your efforts.
Daniel.

Pr. Colquhoun has been the faculty advisor for this year's "Jac". Apart from looking after the business side, he helped us with our work. He encouraged us, and gave us support when we needed it. He was ready to advise, but at the same time he did not force his opinions upon us. His guidance and business work have been much appreciated.
